I have a dream as big as a Syrian refugee child would have once dreamt. I have a dream as bold as Martin Luther King Jr once had. I have a dream as simple as what most innocent people hope for. I have a dream that the countries of the world would share a strong bond together, that the planet will be united with no conflicts in doing so. I dream that no-one should be excluded. I dream that peace would spread throughout the world healing the minds of the terrorists that bring terror into the hearts of innocent people. I dream that no person would be looked down upon another in any way. That no-one would be superior to one another. That everyone treats each other as they would want to be treated themselves. I dream that women and men won't be superior in one way or the other but be equally judged by the qualities of an individual. I dream that women are not discriminated against men and are given the same amount of respect and value that men are given.

I have a dream that Americans will not discriminate or judge anyone who is different from a white, Christian man. That Americans should give equal wages and attention to the thoughts and opinions of women. I dream that America will actually be a country of people that do not judge the opinions and choices of other people. I dream that the people of America do not judge differences, that the people of America do not deny access to the Mexicans that want to cross the border. I dream that America would understand the reason why the Mexicans are crossing the border. They come for opportunities this country provides. They come for the same reason the Pilgrims came to America for its vast amount of resources. They come because Lady Liberty promised them that America is a country of freedom and opportunity. I dream that America gives equal rights to everyone and does not leave anyone out. I dream that America would increase her diversity. I dream that America still lives to her words she said in 1776. That everyone in America should be happy, equal, and free.

I dream that race will not be emphasized in the minds while judging a person. I dream that religion will not matter for the world to unite in peace. I dream that a person's gender will not have to affect the life of a person in any way. I dream there should be freedom of speech for every single person and that they should be heard. When they say their opinion it should not be looked down upon but paid attention to. I also feel like a person should not be looked down upon or judged just because they have an opinion that doesn't agree with yours. I dream that criminals should not be discriminated against just for committing a crime in society.

I dream that education should be provided to everyone around the world, rich or poor. Poor people should not be inferior to rich people and rich people should not be superior to poor people. Poor and rich people should unite into one group of people. Countries should all become allies with one another and not create war, conflicts should be prevented with each other, and peace should be brought out. Fights should not happen over who is better according to their way of thinking and their way of life. I dream that everyone should help each other instead of discriminating and hating each other. I dream that equality and peace should spread throughout the world and we should all live as one nation, free. That is my dream not just for America, but for the whole world.
