Roycemore School in Evanston is offering on-campus enrollment options for the fall with COVID-19 safety protocols in place.

Roycemore School, a Pre-K through 12th grade independent school in Evanston, plans to re-open this fall with enrollment options for families that include five days a week of on-campus instruction, as well as fully online education. The school's small size, large building and status as an accredited independent school grants them the flexibility to make this possible. Roycemore's expert-validated Health and Safety Plan spells out how all local and state health protocols will be enforced to keep students and teachers safe at all times.

"As local school districts release their plans for the 2020-2021 school year, families are becoming concerned about the lack of on-campus learning they see included in those plans," says Amanda Avery, Director of Admissions. Avery continues, "We are hearing from parents all around the northern suburbs and Chicago who feel that their child(ren) would benefit from more on campus instruction, where they are face to face with teachers and fellow students, albeit in a safe environment. We are one of the few schools who can offer that type of learning experience for their kids."

Adrienne Finley Odell, Head of School at Roycemore, will be hosting two virtual Town Halls to respond to the increased interest for Fall enrollment. The Town Halls will be held on July 22nd at 5:00pm and July 23rd at 7:00pm. Learn about the school's reopening plans, ask questions, and get information on their August 5th Admissions Morning. For more information go to www.roycemoreschool.org.
